Why Study Systems Help

- A study system lowers stress because you do not need to decide what to do every time you sit down.
- Good systems are small. They tell you what to read, what to write, and when to review.
- The aim is steady progress, not a perfect day.

A Simple Weekly Plan

- Choose three focus blocks for difficult subjects.
- Keep short review sessions between bigger work sessions.
- End each week by writing what felt clear and what still feels confusing.

Active Reading

- Preview headings before reading the full page.
- Write one question before each section.
- After reading, close the page and explain the main idea in your own words.

Quick Practice

- Pick one chapter and make five questions from the headings.
- Read for fifteen minutes, then answer your own questions without looking.
- Save the hardest question for your next study session.
